McGILL QUALIFIES FOR THE BASKETBALL FINAL TONIGHT

Queen's Team Lost a Closely-Contested Game by 28-25
Score—Manson Chalks Up 17 Points for Red and White—Championship to Be Decided Tonight When Toronto and McGill Clash.

(Special to McGill Daily.)

Ottawa, March 2nd, 1923.— McGill will go into the final game of the play-off series of the Intercollegiate Basketball Championship to-morrow evening, as a result of a victory over Queen's here to-night by a score of 28 to 25. The contest between the Red and White quintet and the Kingston team proved to be one of the most exciting games seen here for some time and whereas it lacked finish in some parts, the average play was of a very high order, and the excitement was keen throughout.

The Montreal basketball team entered the contest as strong favourites over their rivals from Queen's, after the smart victory they had gathered in last week, but they soon found that the tri-color players would be no easy opponents, and the winners were extended to the limit to win. At half time the score was 11 to 10 in McGill's favour.

The winners of the game came down from Montreal on the late afternoon train, and they had to move at a pretty high rate of speed to get onto the floor in time. They maintained the same fast action as soon as the opening whistle blew, and in a very short time had mounted up the good lead of nine points. Eddie Crain started the fireworks by scoring two baskets in quick succession, just after the game started, and the other members joined with a spirit in the pastime of drawing away from the Presbyterians.

A rally by the players from Kingston stopped the sensational rush of the McGills, and the contest developed into a dogged fight to see which of the outfits could stand the strain for the longer time. The game became strenuous, but not rough, and there were several personal fouls, with the result that Lewis had to leave the game at half-time with four personals to his debit.

Entering the final period of the contest with a slight margin, McGill once more took a strong offensive in an effort to widen their edge on the opposing team, but the trading quintet fought doggedly and would not allow them to break away again. The quality of basketball in this session was not as good as that which featured the opening period, but, as far as excitement was concerned, it eclipsed the initial twenty minutes.

Turpel had replaced Little in the second half of the game, in accordance with the usual custom of sending in a fresh forward to strengthen the offensive, and he combined well with the others in their passing under the opposing team's basket. The majority of the shots were sent from far out on the floor, however, and, were it not for this reason, the score might have been much larger. Both of the defensive parts of the teams were playing outstanding games, and they would not allow the forwards to get near enough to take easy shots at the coveted goal. In the realm of the guards, Crain showed to particular advantage in this part of the contest; he intercepted many shots and would then work the ball down the floor with the speedy composition of Manson, Mendelsohn and Turpel.

The most exciting part of the game came in the last few minutes of play. McGill had a three point lead, and were forced back on the defensive by the determined onrush of the Queen's players, in an effort to get the two baskets needed to give them the victory. Poor shooting by the losers lost them many opportunities at this stage of the play, and the contest ended with the Red and White players in the lead by their narrow margin of three points.

The teams:—

ORCHESTRA MEETS AGAIN ON MONDAY

Only Three Weeks to Prepare for Theatre Night

The next rehearsal of the Orchestra for Theatre Night is called for Monday at 8.30 p.m., in the Union. There is only a short time for practice before the regular rehearsals, and finally the big night, so every man who has musical ability of any kind is requested to turn out as soon as he can. There is a lot of work to do and if every man turns out right away it will simplify organization very greatly.

The orchestra met for the first time last Wednesday, and made a good start. There was a fair attendance, but it could have been larger. However owing to the McGill Nite at the Allen on the same evening, it accounted for most of the other musicians being elsewhere occupied. There are quite a few new men who have volunteered their services since Wednesday, so the prospects are very bright.

It is desired to have as large an orchestra as possible for Theatre Night, and it is repeated that any man around College who plays any musical instrument whatsoever is invited to come out on Monday and do his share towards making this big event a success by his services in the Orchestra. The music is not difficult, but it will take all the time available to get things running smoothly. H. E. Key, who is well known at McGill, is acting as conductor.

W. MITCHELL IS ELECTED PRESIDENT

Science Undergrads Elected Officers

HEAVY POLLS

Much Enthusiasm Is Shown by Men of All Classes

As a result of yesterday's elections for the Science Undergraduate Society W. M. Mitchell was elected president, A. O. Leslie chosen as vice-president. A very heavy poll was recorded, practically all the men in the Faculty registering their votes.

C. H. McNaughton was elected secretary and E. F. Finley as assistant-secretary. E. S. Cope was chosen as treasurer. The halls of the Macdonald Engineering Building were jammed between the hours of nine and one yesterday morning with "plumbers" all eager to register their votes, each looking as if the destiny of a nation rested upon his shoulders.

It is thought that the new executive will meet as soon as possible, in order to get into harness for the coming term of office. The other faculties will elect their respective executives within the next few weeks, and it is hoped that they will show as much interest in their affairs as the Faculty of Science. The details of the returns are as follows:

For President—
W. M. Mitchell	223

MISS SLACK TO LEAVE HOSPITAL

Miss Gardner Is Progressing Favorably

This afternoon Miss Zereta Slack, President of the R.V.C. Athletic Association is expected to leave the Royal Victoria Hospital, where she has been a patient for the past ten days or more, following an operation for appendicitis. Prior to the recent athletic contests with Queen's and the University of Toronto girls, Miss Slack was suddenly taken ill and rushed to the hospital. The news of her illness was received with sincere regret by her many friends at McGill, and her loss on the line-up of the Red and White basketball team was greatly felt. It is hoped that she will soon be able to return to her many collegiate activities.

It was reported from the General Hospital last night that Miss Gardner is progressing favorably, and that within the next three weeks it will be known to what extent her recovery will be. The doctors who have been attending her consider her to be an exceptional case, and are pleased with her determined and cheerful manner. Owing to the treatment which has been given her she suffers less than would be expected. Daily she has been visited, and those who call to cheer her are more likely to be cheered by her. It is expected that before many weeks go by that Miss Gardner, who was one of the mainstays of the Physical Eds. hockey team, will be able to return to her home.

PROMINENT ATHLETE SUDDENLY TAKEN ILL

"Don" Foss, one of McGill's most noted men, was suddenly taken ill yesterday at noon. He was rushed to the Royal Victoria Hospital where it was found that he was suffering from appendicitis. Don was operated on late yesterday afternoon and it was reported that he is progressing favorably. He is well known in all branches of athletics. His latest achievement was the winning of the ski dash in the recent meet with Dartmouth. He won the Intercollegiate heavyweight boxing contest at the B.W. & F. meet last year, and was also a valuable man on the football team. It is hoped that he will soon be able to resume his studies, none the worse for his operation.

ONE HUNDRED PERFORMERS TO BE SEEN

Encouragement from R.V.C., M.S.P.E., Meds and Arts

PROPERTY MAN

J. L. Browne Will Take Over Duties Immediately

Further progress was reported yesterday in the Theatre Night plans, when a meeting was held of the faculty representatives in the Council Room of the Union. A. S. Skelly occupied the chair, and expressed his approval of the large turnout; every faculty except Dentistry was represented, and considerable business was transacted. The appointment of J. L. Browne as property man was announced, and he will undoubtedly prove a valuable addition to the staff. His duties will consist of looking after the scenery arrangements and managing the stage shifting during the actual performance.

The first question discussed was the general rehearsal, which will take place next Wednesday. After some discussion it was decided that the wisest plan would be to give each company half an hour with the Director, who will be appointed shortly. This will provide time for the Director to get a good impression of the acts, and any necessary changes can thus be made before the plans are too far advanced.

The Physical Eds. are well ahead with their preparations, and had a successful practice yesterday at the R.V.C. Their skit includes a mixed company and should prove very entertaining. The R.V.C. act is shrouded in mystery, and Miss Foster did not divulge any more than their probable necessities in the way of scenery; however, the talent which is known to exist there, a lively troupe of entertainers will likely be chosen.

The Medical representative brought word of considerable developments, although the exact nature of the piece is not yet a certainty; while Arts have also been far from idle, and rumours of a cabaret scene were not denied by Willard at the meeting. Altogether, over a hundred entertainers will be seen, including those who are in the orchestras.

The matter of a programme was brought up by R. L. Hamilton, and several suggestions were offered. The most feasible kind is a plain one, which will contain little or no advertising; the reason for this is that there are quite enough publications around the college that canvass advertising, and any more would be undesirable.

Within the next few days some startling developments in the different acts will likely be seen, and as they are noted they will be brought to the attention of the students.

The companies of the various faculties are asked to report on Wednesday night as follows, to receive the assistance of the director:—

Medicine—7.30 p.m.
R. V. C.—8.00 p.m.
M. S. P. E.—8.30 p.m.
Commerce—9.00 p.m.
Arts—9.30 p.m.
Dentistry—10.00 p.m.
Special provision will be made for students through the sale of reserved seats. An opportunity to purchase tickets will be given each class within the next few days.

BALLROOM IS FILLED WITH GAY DANCERS

Last Informal Draws Many Students

MANY ENCORES

Latest Dress Fashions Evoke Male Admiration

Notwithstanding the sombre and dreary weather which occasioned the coming of March, taxis rolled up and unloaded gay and happy couples intent on enjoying this last of the so popular informals. The crowd which assembled in the ball room for the first dance, excitedly chattered upon anything and nothing, waiting for the first strains of the incomparable orchestra, augmented for the occasion, presented such a combination of hue and colours as to put to shame Joseph's coat of many colours. The spirit of jollity was in the air and exuberant couples vied with each other in doing the most remarkable acrobatic feats. During the sixth dance it was announced that McGill had won over Queen's in basketball by a score of 28-25. If this could have increased the jollity and exuberance of the throng it was not noticeable except for the loud cheering which greeted the announcement, followed by a vociferous McGill yell. Feet capered on at the continuance of the interrupted music and the night passed eventfully.

It was said recently that since the discovery of Tutankhamen's tomb that the styles would be affected and could be traced to the Egyptian customs of dress. Certainly it was that last evening there appeared to grace the ballroom several Cleopatras with the traditional long ear-rings and other distinctive marks.

The Union Cafeteria surpassed themselves in this last effort to satisfy the inner wants, the music was of the best and as the last strains of "Home Sweet Home" floated in the air, a happy maiden was heard to murmur, ungrammatically yet nevertheless correctly, "Ain't it grand!"

The patrons and patronesses were Dr. and Mrs. Stehle and Prof and Mrs. Caruthers.

The following is a list of names of those present:—
Misses S. Lambley, L. Roi, Audrey Fraser, Ruth Walker, Miss Howell, E. M. Sharp, Francis Lloyd, Kathleen Wade, Irene Martineau, E. I. Perry, Mrs. A. Ree, Miss Dunn, Miss Gravel, Mrs. Gravel, C. SKIERS MEET ON MARCH 13 IN UNION

Propose to Alter Constitution at Annual Meeting

Two alterations to the constitution of the Ski and Snowshoe Club were suggested at the meeting of the executive of that club yesterday, and will be voted on at the annual meeting of the club to be held in the Union on March 13th. The first change in the duties of the manager. In future the manager will find his duties greatly lightened through the appointment of captain. It was the opinion of the meeting that the manager should not be a competitor. As a result of the increasing duties of the manager it is considered that there are far too many duties connected with that office to be performed by one man. For that reason the manager will not be expected to take an active part in the athletic programme.

At the annual meeting the medals won by McGill men during the past winter will be awarded. McGill skiers and snowshoers have made an enviable record since Christmas, and consequently there will be a goodly list of medals and cups to be awarded. The annual election of officers will take place.

In time past the manager has filled the role of captain at the various winter meets. If the members of the club are in favor of the suggestion, a captain will be the addition to the 1923-24 executive.

THE UNIVERSITY OF "HARD KNOCKS"

When Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labor Council of Canada, addressed the McGill Canadian Club some weeks ago, he made reference to the fact that the only university with which he was familiar was the university of "Hard Knocks", meaning, of course, actual contact with the work-a-day world and all the vicissitudes and struggles that that implies.

To be plunged at an early age into the struggle for existence which our modern industrial system seems to have intensified, means that a man will be deprived of many things. He will be subjected to strenuous moral, mental and physical tests that will, if the man is of the right calibre, result in the formation of rugged character, but the very demands of his work upon him will leave scant time for the pursuit of culture and the development of that broader, saner viewpoint that generally accompanies true culture.

The university of "Hard Knocks" tends to develop men of narrow outlook upon life who can see only one side of a problem, to wit, their own. We cannot expect that those who are destined to toil ceaselessly year in and year out for their daily bread will take a disinterested view in regard to the problems that most vitally concern their welfare. Indeed, it is an exception to find a man of this class who expresses such moderate views as does Tom Moore—the ordinary labour leader is a man who cannot but view facts in a distorted light; his whole life and experience have served to fan the flame of his passions against those whom he believes to be his oppressors.

Here we touch upon one of the greatest needs in the world today, that is, the need of the masses for leaders who will not set the rest of the world against them by their violently partisan views. In this connection the work of college-trained men should be increasingly important. They would bring to such leadership well trained minds, free from bias, that would grasp the main essentials of the problems that arise, especially in their relations to other problems, and under such leadership the masses and the classes should be able to work out an economic system more harmonious than the one at present in operation.

INFORMAL DANCES

The informal dance held in the Union last night marks the close of a series of dances which many term "the students' dances". That these dances have been popular is beyond a doubt. Those who have given of their time and energy to make these functions the success that they have been are to be congratulated, and those who are entrusted with the programme for next year will have a standard to maintain.

THE BASKETBALL TEAM

With last night's win at Ottawa the McGill Basketball Team has earned the right to face Varsity for the Intercollegiate title. This match will be the closing game of the season and although it will be staged in Ottawa, and although it is impossible for a large number of Red and White rooters to be on hand, yet the players know that they are warmly supported morally and that every McGill man is proud of the record they have made this year, both in exhibition matches and in the regular games.

WHY STUDY?

Why go to college? Why pore over books? Why concentrate? Why spend four years in an institution called a university, to receive a degree, be able to sign a couple of letters after your name? In answer one might ask "Why succeed in life?" What is education but a cultivation of the power of creativeness, the ability to concoct new ideas? Thomas Edison derides college students because they lack ideas. But do they lack ideas because they have been to college? It is to exercise the brain, to practise concentration, to learn to think out problems, to meet many obligations, fulfilling them punctually and properly, that we pursue courses of higher education. And whether or not we profit by the four years we spend in this practise depends upon whether or not we take seriously the real purpose for which our parents send us here.

Many an enthusiastic student, prominent in affairs both social and scholastic, has been so bold in his enthusiasm as to state that college activities are the bigger part of a college education. Such statements become ridiculous in the face of facts. When educators from the farthest reaches of the country produce statistics of a striking similarity to the effect that it is the student who studies in college who succeeds in after life, the man who stands high in his class who attains a position of prominence in the world of affairs, one can realize, and then only, that it is how well we apply ourselves to the main objective that determines the degree of our success.

The dabbler in college affairs is a hindrance not only to himself but to the institution which he attends. Interested in this, interested in that, but not too interested in any one thing, he bounces around like a rubber ball in a cage, attaining nothing, producing nothing, doing absolutely nothing toward preparing his brain, that with which an educated man is supposed to support himself, for the test of life. He has lost sight of the main purpose for which we attend college—to study. No one can deny this without a feeling somewhere within him that he is pronouncing a falsehood. If an individual's abilities do not extend to participation in more than an ordinary number of enterprises, he should limit himself to those enterprises, for if his duties outnumber his abilities, he is merely dabbling, merely standing upon the tail of his own purpose—he cannot create—he hasn't time; he cannot think—he hasn't time. In short, his advancement is at a standstill—as far as education is concerned. He doesn't know why he is here.

Blessed with more than average ability, a man may do several things and do them well. He is adding to his mental capacity, and training himself to handle innumerable details. But, equipped with just the average powers of performance, a man must limit his activities to the number he can do WELL. A job done and not done well might just as well not be done at all. —Not an adage—a TRUTH. If a man cannot give his best to his college work, to the real essential object for which he came, he has no business attempting anything else. Concentration, efficient performance, coolheadedness, perseverance—those are what we are here to learn. The things we study are merely the medium. But we cannot get those essentials unless we enter wholeheartedly into the process. —Purdue Exponent.

Men donned cords and women wore campus clothes at the annual "Junior Plug" held at the University of California recently. The custom originated in 1880 and is observed yearly.

PURE FOOD

A pint of milk (without the bottle) weighs just one pound.

This is the discovery of co-eds of Ohio State University who have been going to the dairy department at Townsend Hall every noon to partake of a liquid lunch, consisting of a pint of milk sipped through a straw. There is a scale in the department and these co-eds have put it to scientific use. They weigh themselves immediately before drinking and immediately afterwards, and this is the result: A pint of milk raises their weight just one pound.

ONLY 26 FLUNK OUT IN UNIVERSITY HIGH SCHOOL

Out of the 13 pupils enrolled in the University of Oklahoma high school there were 26 failures in one or more subjects during the mid-term examinations, according to Prof. G. E. Meador, principal of the university high school.

The chief causes for these failures was lack of attendance to classes, more than delinquency of the individual pupil. This number constitutes only 5 per cent of the subject enrollment.

TORONTO EDUCATOR SCORES PRACTICE OF INITIATIONS

Prof. A. T. DeLury, Dean of the Faculty of Arts at the University of Toronto, denounced fraternity initiations and advocated residence in an interview published recently in the Canadian college's newspaper. He said that initiations often served ill purposes and was being "snuffed out in colleges which have reached manhood."

In favoring the residence rule, he said that he would not make it compulsory, but that he thought that residence was almost indispensable in securing a thorough education. In this connection, he said that each hall should have its own dining room, in order that college life assume a more intimate character.

Who Gets the Most for His Money?

THE fellow who buys haphazard—or the chap who puts his every-day purchasing on a business basis?

THE LATTER, OF COURSE. He is the one who reads the advertisements and discovers just where he can buy what he wants.

He is the one who realizes the great value of advertising when it comes to the important business of spending his hard-earned money.

The well-informed shopper ALWAYS HAS THE ADVANTAGE when it comes to stretching the dollars. And you can't possibly be up-to-date on the shopping news unless you make a practice of reading the advertisements.

McGILL S.C.A. GUESTS OF UNIV. OF M.

National and International Groups Met
HEATED DISCUSSION
Students and Co-Eds Attend Mock Parliament

The place of religion in school education was the principal subject of controversy at the University of Montreal last night, when the discussion group on Nationalism and Internationalism met.

Otto Klineberg, of McGill, expressed the belief that religious teaching should be given pupils not in school teaching, but in separate denominational groups by priest, minister or rabbi.

J. Bruchesi, of U. of M. took the view that religion was so closely bound up to education that it was impossible to separate them, and varying opinions were expressed by those who attended the meeting.

The group met last evening at 6.15 in the Maison des Etudiants, the U. of M. "Union," for a light supper and discussion. This group was formed after the S.C.A. Conference in Toronto at Christmas, with the idea of continuing the discussion of questions of national and international consequence. These students interested students of the sister university of Montreal, and then formed a definite group, now known under the name mentioned above. A group from the R. V. C. were present, and added their share to the discussion. A number of students from Commerce also made their appearance.

The question discussed last night was school education in general. Professor Desy, of the University of Montreal, occupied the chair.

Otto Klineberg, in the course of his speech, said he favored total abolition of religion in school teaching except that religious teaching should be given to pupils of various denominations by priest, minister or rabbi, in separate groups. At some hour during the day the different groups would be formed and each taught the doctrines of their faith. By this he said that we could arrive at national unity which is so important to the welfare of the country.

J. Bruchesi took the opposite view. He said in his speech of reply that religion was so bound up in education that it was impossible and impracticable to take religion away from the child of the public and high schools in any way. He mentioned that such a course of action would be detrimental to the morals of the children. Even history, which is supposed to be a more or less neutral subject, is influenced by religion to such an extent that a Catholic and a Protestant writer have very conflicting opinions, and their ideas affect the ideas of their readers a great deal.

Several present expressed their opinions, and at times the discussion led away from the subject. One speaker even quoted statistics to substantiate his opinion more strongly. Another reverted to philosophy to point out neutrality was not a correct term to be applied to the schools under such terms.

The discussion became quite heated. Nobody lost their tempers, and all were glad of the occasion to learn the other man's viewpoint. Everybody parted the best of friends.

Prof. Desy, in closing the meeting, said that at present both views seemed irreconcilable, but that he hoped that this would change with time. He also mentioned that on the next meeting of the group the question put up would be the influence of the United States on Canada. The question of the following meeting would be: "What could be the principal ideas of Canadian Politics? Is the actual programme satisfactory?"

Prof. Desy then, on the part of Mr. Bruchesi, invited all those present, both ladies and gentlemen, to attend the Parliament d'Ecole, which means the French Mock Parliament. A great number of those present availed themselves of this opportunity, and listened with great interest to the proceedings. One thing might be mentioned here. The French Parliament allows the fair sex to sit on the floor of the Parliament.

A highly interesting old chart of the St. Lawrence River made by the famous Captain Cook was sold recently at Christie's in London for £1080. It was formerly the property of Admiral Sir W. Fanshawe Martin.

Captain Cook was appointed master of the Mercury in 1759, and was employed during the operations in the St. Lawrence in surveying the channel of the river and piloting the fleet's vessels. The chart measures 115 inches long by 22 inches in depth, and is said to be undoubtedly the original one, from which Captain Cook made at least one duplicate, no win the Admiralty Library.

The purchaser is Robert W. Reford, head of the shipping firm of that name in Montreal, and a director of the Cunard Company. Mr. Reford is a keen collector of things Canadian, so that the old chart is finding a very rightful home.

ALMA MATER COMMITTEE IN SESSION

Tickets to Go on Sale Next Tuesday
GREAT DEMAND
Principal, Deans and Out-of-Town Guests Invited

Tickets for the Alma Mater dance will go on sale to the students in general at one o'clock on Tuesday next, and will be given to the first comers at the Union Tuck Shop, where the pasteboards are usually distributed. The date was considered as the most favorable one for the majority of the men wishing to attend the function as, by that time, nearly all of the students will have received their welcome monthly allowances and will be able to expend the necessary money for the affair.

The meeting of the Dance Committee which was held in the Union yesterday afternoon was an enthusiastic one, and many of the plans for the affair were further attended to. As announced previously, there will be no preference given to men according to years, and the tickets will be sold to the undergraduates first presenting themselves at the Union on Tuesday afternoon. Indications are that there will be many disappointed, but it is only possible to allot enough tickets to fill the hall comfortably, much as that plan may prove to be dissatisfactory to the men who will be unable to get them because they did not arrive on time.

Invitations have been extended to the Universities of Toronto, Queen's and Montreal to send representatives to the dance and it is very likely that they will be accepted in the near future. Among the list of invited guests for the dance are the Principal and Deans of the faculties, and their wives, while Miss Hurlbatt, Warden of the Royal Victoria College, has also been asked to be present for the occasion.

With no further dances scheduled to take place before the Alma Mater, the work of decorating the hall will be commenced in the near future. The committee has already outlined the scheme of decorations for the ball room and lounge rooms, and the men in charge of this end of the work will have the first task in connection with the event.

MACCABAEANS TO MEET TONIGHT

Debate with Toronto Menorah in Union at 8:15 P.M.

Debating teams representing the Toronto Menorah and Maccabean Circle of McGill meet in the McGill Union tonight at 8.15 p.m. in a debate that has become an annual event in the programmes of both societies. Last year, the Maccabean team, O. Klineberg, M.A., and H. Batshaw, travelled to Toronto and carried off the laurels by a very close margin. This year, a strong Toronto team intends to duplicate this and carry them back to the Queen City.

Both societies have chosen their leading orators and debaters to represent them. S. Berger and L. Borsok—the Toronto team—are orators and debaters of established ability, combining delivery and style in a commendable manner. They threaten to attack the affirmative side, J. H. Goldsmith, Comm. '23, and P. J. Usher, Law '24 representing Maccabean Circle, and who are well known in college and Circle affairs as being debaters of merit and well able to support their side.

The subject of the debate is: "Resolved that the Jewish religion in its fundamental principles as well as in its external forms, should be modified to conform with modern developments in science and culture." Members of the professoriate are included among the judges. Members of the Circle and all others are welcome.

Tickets may be obtained from any member of the Executive, or class representative, or at the door for fifty cents.

But lies are lovely—O, I want them now, For all the green spring boughs break into flame, And high above the mist the young blue skies Flash through the wings of homing birds that came Last year when I was only learning how Worlds magic was but borrowed from your eyes.

"The truth is best" you said, "and you'll forget"— Perhaps I will when spring has gone again; But now when I hear bird wings brushing by, And feel the wind's touch, truth is only pain. And lies would tell me that I hold you yet For just a little longer. . . Can you lie? . . . S. M.

ADDRESS ON WIRELESS TO PHYSICISTS

Lt.-Com. Edwards Spoke Before Physical Society
ILLUSTRATED LECTURE
Physics Lab. Was Filled to Capacity

A capacity audience greeted Lieut.-Commander Edwards of the Government Wireless Department at the fortnightly meeting of the Physical Society yesterday afternoon. The members of the society and the large number of students interested in radio-telephony were well repaid for foregoing the delights of an early dinner for the speaker's illustrated lecture on "Direction Finding by Means of Radio Telephony" was intensely interesting and instructive. It is a matter of regret that Commander Edwards was forced from lack of time to omit a part of his address and dismiss with only a word a number of his slides.

In commencing his address, Commander Edwards stated that it was his purpose to discuss the principles underlying finding the direction of incoming signals in radio-telephony.

The Canadian Government has erected four large stations on the Atlantic coast. The station at Canso, N.S., has masts 120 feet high with wire running from the high pole to a smaller and then to the set. The station at Cape Race, Newfoundland, is used perhaps more than any other in the world with dozens of ships checking their position with it. All stations have two transmitters and an emergency engine for power.

One of the most trying things these stations have to contend with is what is known as "night effect." Waves sent at night are from time to time deflected by what is thought to be the heavy side layer. Although investigation and knowledge of this phenomena is only in its infancy rapid strides are being made.

When a ship desires knowledge or confirmation of its situation, three stations take "sights" on the ship and by comparing this they can get the location of the ship to within a quarter of a mile.

Despite the efforts of the Government to be of service, cases occur in which the masters of ships either disregard or disbelieve the reports of the stations and at times meet with disaster.

At the close of Lieut.-Commander Edwards' address a moving picture film depicting the methods used in locating aeroplanes by radio in the London-Brussels air service was shown by courtesy of the Marconi Company.

Dr. Eve stated that anyone who wished was at liberty to leave and after the exodus enthusiastic members of the society remained for discussion with Commander Edwards.

MISSIONARIES SPEAK AT TORONTO COLLEGE

The missionary problems of India, China, and British Guiana were made clear by three speakers from those countries to the students of Knox College in recent addresses. The Rev. Dr. Donald, touching upon the situation in India, said the greatest work of the church was done among the outcasts, the 60,000,000 despised and shunned humans, who, the Brahmins said, had no soul. The Protestants in India now number more than 2,000,000.

The Rev. J. A. Scrimgeour, Presbyterian missionary to British Guiana, told of the demoralization of these Indian people through contact with western civilization. They had lost the philosophy of the Orient, and had replaced it with the careless immorality of so many white men in tropical countries. From the schools where the Bible is taught with other subjects have risen lawyers, ministers and members of the Executive Council.

Much brighter was the picture which the Rev. John Griffith presented of a China where department stores and other commercial and industrial enterprises are rising with a perfection of equipment that rivals even those of the West.

"Put people, like pictures, in the best light," said Emerson, the philosopher and essayist. And yet people rarely live up to that simple rule. The most important and interesting thing in a community or campus is usually its gossip. The old maid with the wagging tongue and catty nature, and the cynical and satirical bachelor are merely the leaders of the tribe. Nothing seems to give the average individual more pleasure than the opportunity to tell an "exclusive" story which is derogatory to the reputation of some acquaintance. "I just heard this one, but do not tell it to a soul," and so the rare morsel of gossip is joyfully passed around.

The love of gossip is a human weakness—to urge against it is probably trite and useless preaching. To point out that gossip has no respect for truth or falsity, for individuals or consequences, is to preach an ancient sermon. But as long as it is one of the great sins of the race, at least some good can come from denouncing the habit. Utopia might come to earth if people would really try to picture others in the best light, rather than delight in presenting them in the darkest hue of their weaknesses and shortcomings.—Daily Texar.

NOMINATIONS CIRCULATING FOR COUNCIL

Tuesday the Last Day for Nomination Lists
GOOD MEN
Undergraduates Will Have Difficulty in Choice

Fervish activity marks the final days for preparing nomination lists for the Students' Council and Union executive offices, and it seems definitely certain that there will be at least three-cornered battles for the majority of the positions. Information gleaned about the campus yesterday disclosed the fact that there were already several lists of names being circulated among the students for the purpose of securing further signatures, while some men have intimated that there would be still further lists started on a last minute round to-day and Monday morning.

There seems to be an unusually large list of competent men available for the various positions, and the undergraduates will be puzzled to choose the most efficient in many cases. Under the conditions of the present campaign it is very likely that strenuous election work on behalf of the various candidates will be carried on, and the college will be the scene of some exciting gatherings between nomination and election day.

The fact that there are only two vacancies on the Students' Council being contested for may be one of the main causes of the exceedingly keen competition for the offices. Under the new system of athletic management that has gone into force the personnel of the Council has been cut down in number considerably, and there are now four men to be elected (than has been the case in former years).

The nomination lists must be presented at the office of the Students' Council in the McGill Union before Monday evening, and the following day will mark the first attempt to round up the supporters for the various men. It is likely that the plan adopted a few years ago will be followed and the men running for the various offices will be called upon to address the undergraduates at one or more gatherings before election day.

FAME

An obscure news article in the Chicago Tribune tells of the death in poverty of Professor William Conrad Roentgen, the discoverer of the X-ray.

The X-ray has proved to be of invaluable benefit to mankind. Millions might have been made by its inventor had he patented his invention. But he chose no glory nor fortune for himself. Instead he gave the value of his discovery freely to the world.

Tomorrow gratified mankind will build statues to his memory. Even today it is thinking of the good that he has done. But yesterday he died in poverty and want.

Few there are who knew his name or what was the immense service that he rendered, the suffering that his invention had stopped or mitigated.

There are scientists on the campus who are likewise giving their lives to the service of mankind. We wonder if they, too, will be forgotten while they live and remembered only when they die.—Wisconsin Daily Cardinal

CURIOUS STATUES OF LEAD

When it was announced that the fittings and remaining contents of Stowe House would be put up for sale by auction, there was considerable curiosity as to the fate of the lead statue of King George I, on the north front, and the old lead figures of Venetian lions. Stowe House, it should be explained, was formerly the seat of the Dukes of Buckingham, but this is no time, with heavy taxation in all their ancient splendour, and Stowe House has been sold. In a short time it will be opened as a public school, the rival, it is hoped, of Eton and Harrow.

Lead statues are not necessary to the success of a public school, but the representatives of that new-born institution were prepared to spend 350 guineas in buying the effigy of King George, a life-size equestrian figure.

The statue, as we have said, is made of lead; and very few lead statues are to be found today. At one time they were fairly popular. John van Nost, a Dutch sculptor, who came to England in the wake of King William III, set up a lead figure yard in Piccadilly which lasted for more than 100 years. The figures were cast in lead as large as life, and frequently painted with an intention to resemble nature. They consisted of Punch, Harlequin, Columbine and other pantomime characters, haymakers resting on their rakes, mowers whetting their scythes, Roman soldiers with firelocks, or Africans bearing sundials on their heads. As a rule these lead effigies were intended as garden ornaments.

Men of taste despised them, and perhaps on that account few statues in lead of eminent men were executed. Curiously enough, the two most famous lead statues today represent King William III. One of them is at Petersfield, in Hampshire. It consists of 20 pieces of lead, and has an interesting history. In 1731 a movement was started in London for the erection of a statue to Dutch William, but although sufficient money was forthcoming, the Common Council vetoed the proposal for political reasons. As a protest equestrian statues of the King were erected in many towns, notably Bristol and Hull. The Petersfield statue, the sculptor of which is unknown, was erected by Sir William Jolliffe, then member of Parliament for the town, who put it up in front of his house.

But alas! in course of time it was found to be in such a state of disrepair that it might have collapsed at any moment, for lead is far less durable than marble or bronze. William was, in fact, becoming undone; he was very much out of joint; and it required a sum of £350 to rivet his plates together and give him a coat of paint and gilt. And there, rejuvenated, he stands in Petersfield today.

Dublin too has its lead statue of King William III which stands near unto the old Irish House of Parliament. This equestrian figure of "King Billy," as he was called, was the object of both mischief and merriment. At one time His Majesty was annually decorated with orange ribbons to celebrate the anniversary of the Battle of the Boyne, and just as often bereft of them by indignant Nationalists. But when after long years of ill-treatment, it became necessary to put "King Billy" in good repair, it was the Irish Nationalists who found most of the money.

Willie—Ma, what's that man up in front shaking his stick at the lady for? Mother—Hush, Willie, that's the director. He's not shaking his stick. Willie—Then what's she yelling for?—Jack-o-Lantern.

TORONTO STUDENT P.E.I. SCHOLAR

University of Toronto has been kindly honoured in the selection of one of her undergraduates, E. W. McInnes, 273, University College, as Rhodes Scholar for Prince Edward Island.

The Rhodes Scholarship is the gift of Mr. C. J. Rhodes, and is given in open competition in each province. This year the Ontario Selection Committee have granted the scholarship to a Queen's man. As there is no university in Prince Edward Island the scholarship has usually been given to a student of one of the eastern universities, but this year the Selection Committee deemed it fitting to give it through University of Toronto.

The last Rhodes' Scholarship went to Queen's, while in 1921 it was given to J. Lowe, B.A., of Trinity College. In 1919 and 1920 the scholarship was awarded to M. D. C. Tait and J. R. Stirrett, respectively, both of University College.

Mr. McInnes, this year's winner for P.E.I., is a native of that province, and was educated at the Prince of Wales College.

After serving three years with the Canadian Garrison Artillery overseas where he was wounded, Mr. McInnes came to Toronto University and entered the honor course in philosophy, English and History.

He is a resident of Knox College, and plays on the Knox Sifton Cup team in the Inter-faculty Series. He also takes a great interest in other sports. He is musically inclined, plays the piano, and is a member of the Stringed Instrument Club in which he plays the mandolin.

Mr. McInnes is a member of The Varsity staff and has written many clever stories and articles for this paper.

During the war Mr. McInnes spent much of his spare time writing verse and published a collection of poems under the title "The Road to Arras."

In 1921 Mr. McInnes was the winner of the Jardine Memorial Prize for English Verse, and last session he received the George Oat Scholarship given in Knox College for English Bible.

Mr. McInnes has decided to study Modern History at Oxford upon graduation at Toronto, but has not yet decided which of the Colleges he will enter. After completing his course at Oxford Mr. McInnes intends entering the Presbyterian ministry. He spent last summer on a mission field at Bay of Chaleur, New Brunswick.

Tutankhamen, Tutankhamen, Who's the chap so rude and common Thus to wake you from your slumbers? In the list of old back-numbers? Is it fit to sut surh capers In each morning's daily papers, You, a duomillennarian? Better to have turned a Brahmin, Tutankhamen, Tutankhamen!

Tutankhamen, Tutankhamen, Think you they should put a bomb in All your best sarcophaguses? Should the disrespectful cusses Desecrate the tombs of Luxor? That would make a high-grade crook sore,

Just to see some noble rummy Steal a poor defenceless mummy, With the shroud he laid his dame in, Tutankhamen, Tutankhamen! —Yale News.

SCROOGE'S TAVERN

In "A Christmas Carol" we are told that Scrooge "took his melancholy dinner in his usual melancholy tavern; and having read all the newspapers, and beguiled the rest of the evening with his banker's book, went home to bed."

There were many taverns in the city of London at which Scrooge might have dined, and it may be that Baker's Chop-House in Change Alley, as has been suggested, was the one he chose. It is no longer a chop-house, having a year or so back been taken over by a city business company, and the building added to their premises. But it had been for a century or more a noted city chop-house, where, up to the last, meals were served on pewter plates, and other old-time customs were retained. It was one of those city houses, of which some still exist happily, where the waiters grow old in the service of their customers. Baker's had at least one such waiter, known familiarly as James, who pursued his calling there for thirty-five years, and became famous by having his portrait painted in oils and hung in the lower room, where it remained until the end of the career of the house as a tavern. Perhaps old Scrooge was one of his special customers.—B. W. Matz, in "Dickensian Inns and Taverns."

CRIMES OF THE PRESS

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead, who never to himself hath said, I could run a newspaper, or all the newspapers, better than the subsidized and incompetent scoundrels who are doing it now. If so, we have never met him. However complete and evident a failure he may be as a business man a citizen, a husband, and a father, there is one point on which the average man will admit of no doubt whatever—his ability to manage a newspaper. Nevertheless, we venture to believe that even the production of a newspaper is a form of skilled labor, and not so easy as it looks."—New York Times.

CO-EDS NOW USING "ROYAL BAKING."

Co-eds are substituting "Royal Baking" for the expensive French face powders.

It has been estimated that the average lifetime of a woman is seventy-five. The modern girl starts using cosmetics at twelve. This would leave sixty-three years, during which time she would spend $1,168.02 on face powder. This sum would pay the tuition for one semester of nine and a half students.

On the other hand it would buy 1,557 sacks of flour, which in turn would make 2,491,776 loaves of bread. One of the fairer sex has decided to go into the chicken business. For $1,168.02 she can get 1,168 chickens. In one year they will lay 11,025 eggs. These, in turn, will be sold and more chickens bought. In sixty-three years she will have $6,863,240.08 to put toward the U. S. C. endowment fund.

Another has decided to spend her $1,168.02 in decorating the graves of the unknown soldier. She finds she can decorate 12,660 graves with roses and seventeen with violets for her sum.

This baking powder idea is an entirely new experiment, and is expected to be very uplifting. One who has already tried it claims she rises every day.

Try These on Your Landlady

But we'd back our Mrs. Malaprop against yours any day. Here's some samples:

"My ma was awful strict about my morals. Never let me go out, she didn't, without a shampoo."

"My uncle got bronchicken, an' that developed into consomething; an' he fally died of an ulster on his stomach."

"We're going to build a condition onto the house so's we can entertain the neighbors with more hostility."

A northern man visiting the South got so warm that he decided to telegraph home for his light "undies". He telegraphed the following: "S.O.S. B.V.D. P.D.Q."
